A Guide to Writing Your Novel in One Year. You've probably heard the tales of people who spend their entire lives writing a novel. It seems so noble. Year after year, they churn out a chapter or two, carving out characters as real to them as family members. They work on an unpredictable schedule that's dictated by mood or inspiration.

Writing lists can be done as a contest to see who can write the most words. In order to measure students' progress, at the end of the course, have the students do a final freewrite (with no topic), and have them compare the number of words they wrote with their first freewrite. As a writing heuristic freewriting has many uses.
